Flints are not used in the body of the porcelain, but are necessary in the manufacture. Boulder flints are preferred for pottery purposes, being as flints. In order to prepare them they are placed in a specially constructed kiln and calcined at a red heat. They are then allowed to cool, and in the cooling become perfectly white, In this state they are crushed and ground like other materials. The best flints are of a dark gray color, and have a considerable degree of transparency. Those having brown or yellow spots on their interior surfaces should be rejected, as flints of this kind would pro duce a ware blemished by the spots.

Calcined bones are largely used in the manufacture of English porcelain. For this purpose ox bones only are suitable. These are brought in large quantities from South America. China clay is the feldspar of decomposed granite rock. According to analysis its average composition is: Silica, 46 per cent; alumina, 40 per cent; lime and potash, 4 per cent; water, 10 per cent. It is washed from the decomposed rock and allowed to settle in large vats, from which it is cut in blocks when dry, and packed on board ship for transport to the potteries.

Cornish Stone (Petuntse) is the decomposed granite rock found in Cornwall. It is composed of feldspar partially decomposed, quartz, and a talcose material. It is quarried at St. Stephen's, in Cornwall, and is sent to the various potteries without any preparation.

Flints are not used in the body of the porcelain, but are necessary in the manufacture. Boulder flints are preferred for pottery purposes, being as a rule more free from lime than chalk flints. In order to prepare them they are placed in a specially constructed kiln and calcined at a red heat. They are then allowed to cool, and in the cooling become perfectly white, In this state they are crushed and ground like other materials. The best flints are of a dark gray color, and have a considerable degree of transparency. Those having brown or yellow spots on their interior surfaces should be re jected, as flints of this kind would produce a ware blemished by the spots. Calcined bones are largely used in the manufacture of English porcelain. For this purpose ox bones only are suitable. These are brought in large quantities from South America. SUCCESSFUL DEMONSTRATION. Herman Feustel, Jr., of the decorating department of the East End pottery, has taken the general agency for the American and Eureka chemical fire extinguisher and has opened offices in the Potters National bank building. The extinguisher has an established reputation and has been endorsed by the insurance companies. The extinguisher is particularly adapted to factories, school houses, churches and such like buildings. Mr. Feustel gave a demonstration of the extinguisher yesterday afternoon that was witnessed by several hundred spectators. A large bonfire, made up of highly combustible articles, was easily smothered with the extinguisher. The demonstration substantiated every claim that has been made.

Holding Up a Bank.

Perhaps the first Confederate bank raided by Union soldiers was one at Charleston, Va., as Milroy was making his way up the Shenandoah valley.

"Bumming" was in its infancy then, but a dozen of the fellows found themselves ahead of the army and resolved to strike for a big stake. They made a sudden attack on the town at daylight and then dashed in and made for the bank. They broke in the door with an ax, obliged the banker to unlock his safe and something like $600,000 was carried away as they retreated.

A day later they bundled up $100,000, strapped it on the back of an old lame mule and hired a farmer to deliver the wealth" to General Milroy in person. Accompanying the money was a note, which advised the general to bribe the Confederates to keep ahead of him and do no fighting. As his military maneuvers had been checkmated right along and his reputation was under a cloud, it was a hard shot at him. The story got to Washington and was commented on by President Lincoln, and it has been asserted that the president's levity caused the general to tender his resignation.

That the new division of the Sons of Temperance, recently organized in the East End, as a result of special union meetings held at the Second Presbyterian church, is to become a power for good among the young people, is apparent from the developments at the meeting of the organization held last night in P. H. C. hall. It will be remembered that the socicty was formed about three weeks ago with something near 25 charter members and that at a subsequent meeting competent and officient officers were elected. Last night the records showed that the membership had been increased to 75, and the end

The society is to be rewarded for its great increase in numbers by the national organization. It had been promised that if a membership of 75 was reached a gift of 250 volumes of choice literature would be made and division No. 8 was not slow in getting to work. A time limit was set for the performance of the work and the time was up last night. It was determined at the meeting last night to place the volumes and others to be provided by the local division at the disposal of the general public, and with this end in view the unoccupied room in the new Davis building on Mulberry street has been leased and will be fitted up for some time. as a reading room. No Oil Found in the Geer Well, De spite Some Exciting Reports.

Interest in the development of the oil territory in the vicinity of Chester received a boost last evening, and well the wildest excitement prevailed Word was received in town late in the afternoon that the sand had been struck, and that me prospects were of the best. Immediately upon the receipt of the news every man in Chester who owned stock in the venture made preparations to visit the well, which is being drilled on the Geer farm, near the Elwood school house.

James Cochran hooked up and took the whole family out to the well; George Howells, Jack Evans, John Webster and John Wells also hastened to the city, where they reported that tures were eliminated. "Don't go near it," he said to his family.

"What is it?" asked Charlie Rabbit, sniffing around the sides, for he could smell the bunch of fresh celery with which the trap was baited, and he was just dying to make a meal of it.

"It's a trap set to catch you by Jimmy Jones, the farmer's son. Jimmy's is a 1 father likes rabbit meat, and Jimmy wants to please him, so he thought he would get us in his trap and give us to his father to eat. But instead of getting in we will wait out here until the farmer comes along and see what happens.'

So they hid in the tall grass until they saw the farmer and his son coming across the field. Jimmy thought that by this time there must be something in his trap, so he said to his fa-"Pop, I've got something for you over there in the grass. Go over and get it." "What is it?" asked his father.

"Never mind; you go over and see for yourself," said Jimmy, for he wanted to surprise his father. Mr. Jones walked along through the grass, but he didn't see the trap until the toe of his shoe struck it, and away he went heels over head on his nose on the ground. He scrambled to his feet, as mad as he could be, and reached out and grabbed Jimmy by the collar.

"So you hid an old box in the grass for me to stumble over and hurt myself, 'did you?" he cried angrily. "Well, I'll teach you a little lesson that you will never forget." And with that he pitched into Jimmy and gave him such a lambasting that he will never forget as long as he lives to tell the tale. And all the time the rabbit family sat over in the tall grass and snickered as they thought what a terrible fate they had escaped and how sorry little Jimmy must feel that he had ever tried to catch them to make a meal for his father.-Chicago Tribune.

So they hid in the tall grass until they saw the farmer and his son coming across the field. Jimmy thought that by this time there must be something in his trap, so he said to his father:

"Pop, I've got something for you over there in the grass. Go over and get it." "What is it?" asked his father.

"Never mind; you go over and see for yourself," said Jimmy, for he wanted to surprise his father. Mr. Jones walked along through the grass, but he didn't see the trap until the toe of his shoe struck it, and away he went heels over head on his nose on the ground. He scrambled to his feet, as mad as he could be, and reached out and grabbed Jimmy by the collar.

"So you hid an old box in the grass for me to stumble over and hurt myself, 'did you?" he cried angrily. "Well, I'll teach you a little lesson that you will never forget."

And with that he pitched into Jimmy and gave him such a lambasting that he will never forget as long as he lives to tell the tale.

And all the time the rabbit family sat over in the tall grass and snickered as they thought what a terrible fate they had escaped and how sorry little Jimmy must feel that he had ever tried to catch them to make a meal for his father.-Chicago Tribune.

Egypt, the land of unfathomable antiquity, the oldest of these rabbits evilization of the orient, noted not only around the cenfor her magnificence and power, but for knowledge, wisdom and engineering skill, understood and made practical use of such important hydraulic devices as the siphon and the syringe, the latter being a remarkable invention and the real parent of the modern pump. Whether or not syringes were ever fitted with inlet and outlet valves, a leather bag set in a frame and worked by the feet, the operator standing with one foot on each bag, expelling the inclosed air, the exhaust bag being then lifted by a string to refill it with air, implies the use of a valve opening inward, and it is difficult to conceive of a continuous operation without one

BRIGHTS DISEASE DIABETES NEWS

San Francisco, Nov. 4, 1903. Will Reed's Pharmacy:

Dear Sirs:-The discovery in this city of a new diuretic is saving thousands of lives. It is hard for people to believe who are not eye witnesses. You as a brother druggist well know that up to this time chronic Bright's Disease and Diabetes have been necessarily fatal. It is so no longer. And I not only know this by being on the ground, but I was also one of the patients, I had both Bright's Disease and Diabetes and looked upon death as inevitable. I was so prejudiced I wouldn't buy the new treatment. I couldn't believe it. So they gave it to me to prove it. I not only recovered, but have since given it to somewhere near fifty patients and know of only three or four failures.

I am a pioneer druggist of this city; have been doing business on my own premises for 48 years, and I now declare to you on the honor of a brother pharmacist the absolute curability of these dread diseases in about ninetenths of all cases. I understand the business men who are placing it before the world have appointed you to represent them in your city, and I beg saved and friends to be made.

Yours sincerely, CARL D. ZEILE. We sent for the Fulton Compounds to which the above refers and now have them in stock. They are the first cures the world has ever seen for chronic Bright's Disease and Diabetes. Free pamphlet.

Machines for raising water may be said to be as old as civilization itself, and their invention extends so far beyond written history that no one can say when the art of lifting and distributing water began. In the middle ages at the girdle were hung the thousand and one odds and ends needed and utilized in every day affairs. The scrivener had his ink horn and pen attached to it, the scholar his book or books, the monk his crucifix and rosary, the innkeeper his tallies, and everybody his knife. So many and so various were the articles attached to it that the flippant began to poke fun.

In an old play there is mention of merchant who had hanging at his girdie a pouch, a spectacle case, a "pun-niard," a pen aud ink horn and "a handkerchief, with many other trinkets besides, which a merry companion seeing said it was like a haberdasher's shop of small wares." In another early play a lady says to her maid: "Give me my girdle and see that all the furniture be at it. Look that cizers, pineers, the penknife, the knife to close letters with, the bodkin, the ear pick. er and the scale be in the case."

Dear Sirs:-The discovery in this city of a new diuretic is saving thousands of lives. It is hard for people to believe who are not eye witnesses You as a brother druggist well know that up to this time chronic Bright's Disease and Diabetes have been necessarily fatal. It is so no longer. And I not only know this by being on the ground, but I was also one of the patients, I had both Bright's Disease and Diabetes and looked upon death as inevitable. I was so prejudiced wouldn't buy the new treatment. couldn't believe it. So they gave it to me to prove it. I not only recovered, but have since given it to some where near fifty patients and know of only three or four failures.

I am a pioneer druggist of this city; have been doing business on my own premises for 48 years, and I now declare to you on the honor of a brother pharmacist the absolute curability of these dread diseases in about ninetenths of all cases. I understand the business men who are placing it before the world have appointed you to represent them in your city, and I beg to tell you that there are lives to be saved and friends to be made. Some Linen Remembrances

HE house mistress is always delighted to have her store of linens added to, and Christmas is a good time to remember a fad of this kind. A graceful, well worked F. E. ALLEN'S centerpiece is a present most women will be glad to have given them.

The lace is not quite as wide as that on the centerpiece, and the design for the embroidery is reduced to suit the size of the dollies. The napkins to be used with this set are of the same ecru linen and lace. They are finished with an inch wide hem, and narrow lace is put around the entire napkin. THE CONNEAUT MOUNDS.

Origin of Ancient Burial Places Still

Remains a Mystery. [Copyright 1903 by American Press Association. The land now covered by the flourishing town of Conneaut, O., is historic even to the degree of being prehistoric. In addition to the interest which attaches to it as a place of early settlement in Ohio, it was the site of mounds and ancient burial places. The antiquity of these was so great that the Incians who roamed the shores of Lake Erie in the Eighteenth century them as were the first white men who settled nearby. All that they could say in explanation of them was that

MINE IMPROVEMENTS

The Pittsburg Coal compony is fast completing the big improvements to ts mine at Irondale. The engine, machinery, stacks, dynamo and electrical mining machinery are the work of Head Bros., of Youngstown. The works will employ for the present 40 or 50 men, and this force will probably be augmented to 100 when the mine is put in full operation.

The equipment is of most modern patterns, and will enable the company to put a large output of coal upon the market this winter.
